AC Milan are preparing to face Juventus on Sunday 26 April at 20:45 CEST at San Siro, on Matchday 34 of the Serie A season. A heavyweight clash that promises plenty of excitement, with the campaign approaching its decisive phase and every point becoming increasingly crucial. As kick-off draws closer, here is our Match Preview.

LATEST FROM MILANELLO
It has been some time since AC Milan last faced Juventus — the previous meeting came early in the first half of the season — and the sides have not met at San Siro since November 2024. Allegri's squad put a difficult spell behind them with victory away to Verona, though the moment remains delicate. Napoli sit second, three points ahead, while Juventus are close behind in fourth, also three points back. The advantage over the chasing pack in the race for the Champions League places is encouraging but far from definitive. This is therefore a direct clash that cannot be underestimated — potentially the final major obstacle this season. It has been an intense week of work at Milanello. The squad is at full strength and no major changes are expected in the starting line-up. There are no suspensions, while Athekame, Fofana, Leão, Modrić and Saelemaekers are all one booking away from suspension.
